CONCEPTION'S CLOSE JUNE 7

COLLEGE TO GRADUATE 19 FROM H. S. DEPARTMENT.

DR. PURCELL SPEAKER

Kansas Citian Widely Known for His Work for Church.—Graduates From Seven States.

Dr. Thomas E. Purcell, K. S. G., of Kansas City, a prominent Knight of Columbus and leader in social welfare work, will give the address at the commencement exercises for the graduates of Conception College and academy.

The commencement program will be held at 8 o'clock Thursday night, June 7, at the Parish Hall. There will be nineteen graduates from the high school department.

Thomas C. Lysaught, Kansas City, Kan., made the highest grades in four years of high school and has been made the valedictorian of his class.

Charles Downey, Plattsburgh, Mo., is the class salutatorian.

From Seven States.

The graduates are representative of seven different states. There are Missouri, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and North Dakota.

The following will receive diplomas: Lawrence Archer, Conception Junction; Adrian Bresson, Wooster, Ohio; John Perry Fechte, Venice, Ill.; Joseph Heinen, La Verne, Ia.; Edgar Huber, Sioux City, Ia.; Lawrence Kalin, Steinauer, Neb.; Frank Kossen, Springfield, Mo.; Tom Lysaught, Kansas City, Kan.; Fred Mench, Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Brosnahan, Afton Junction, Ia.; William Cole, Earling, Ia.; Charles Downey, Plattsburgh, Mo.; Francis Enis, Clyde; Robert Teson, Clyde; Joseph A. Wisnieski, Dodge, Neb.; Harold Bruegging, Jefferson City, Mo.; Thomas Malone, Minot, N. D.; Adolph Stremel, Garden City, Kan.; Felix Tuger, O'Fallon, Mo.

Commenting on the obtaining of Dr. Purcell as commencement speaker, the Rev. Norbert Wagner, rector of the College, said this morning:

Leads in Many Activities.

"The College is singularly fortunate in securing a man of Dr. Purcell's ability. Dr. Purcell has been a leader in so many activities since coming to Kansas City that it would be practically impossible to completely describe his work for community and Church. He has that rare combination of high Catholic ideals and a natural talent for organization. The Catholic lay people of Kansas City have grown accustomed to look to him for leadership in almost every movement that is started for the good of the Church.

"His outstanding achievement is the organization of Our Lady of Guadalupe parish for the Mexican people. It was due to his constant help and encouragement that Father Jose Munoz, a refugee from Mexico, was able to surmount the many difficulties little realized by persons unfamiliar with conditions in the Mexican settlement. It was equally due to Dr. Purcell's untiring efforts that Father Munoz was able to acquire the fine stone church at Twenty-second and Madison Streets. The church formerly belonged to a Protestant congregation, who disposed of it at a very reasonable figure.

"Dr. Purcell is almost equally interested in the Italian and Negro parishes of the city. It was through his efforts that the Agnes Ward Amberg Club was formed to do social work in the foreign settlements.

Former State Deputy.

"He has been a member of the Kansas City council of the Knights of Columbus almost since its chartering, and was one of the first members of the local fourth degree assembly. He was State Deputy of the order for three successive terms, the only man to hold that record, and is now Master of the Fourth Degree for the western district of Missouri. He has been lecturer and Grand Knight of Kansas City Council.

"He has long been a leader in the activities of the Catholic Club, and for the past two years has been President of the particular council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

"In March, 1924, he had the rare honor of being named a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great by the Holy Father Pope Pius XI."

Dr. C. C. James on 6 Weeks' Trip Abroad

Former Pastor of M. E. Church Here Sailed Saturday to Visit England, Scotland and France.

Dr. C. C. James of Cameron, former pastor of the First M. E. Church here, sailed last Saturday abroad the S. S. George Washington for England, where he will spend six weeks touring that country and Scotland and France.

Dr. James was sent abroad by friends in return for the service he has given. A purse was presented him for the purpose.

Mrs. James, during his absence, is visiting a daughter, Miss Lillian James at Bookings, S. D. Miss Minnie James of Maryville, another daughter, will join them later on and they will meet Dr. James when he returns to New York City.

HOUSE VOTES TO ADJOURN ON TUESDAY

Resolution Is Adopted by 303 to 57 Vote—Frequent Night Sessions Will Be Held.

Washington, May 24.—Amid general jubilation, the House late today adopted a resolution for adjournment of Congress next Tuesday at 5 o'clock. The vote was 303 to 57, a handful of farm bloc members and Democrats opposing the date fixed. The resolution now goes to the Senate where leaders indicated it will be passed.

Republican leaders earlier had hoped to end the session Saturday.

The only major legislative matter awaiting action is the Swing-Johnson Boulder Dam bill, now before both Houses, but numerous conference reports still remain to be cleared, chiefly those on the tax bill and Muscle Shoals. Because of the jam, frequent night sessions will be held until adjournment.

USUAL SPRING BUILDING DONE

SEVERAL ADDITIONS ARE MADE IN RESIDENCE SECTION.

STORES ARE IMPROVED

Although No "Boom" Is Experienced, Construction Activities Here Are Reported Normal.

Although no "building boom" has been experienced here this spring, a normal period of improvement has been noted with several additions to the residential sections and remodeling of buildings in the business district. The usual spring painting has kept the painters busy. New sidewalks have been constructed and others are being ordered by the city council.

One of the recent moves toward beautifying the city has started at the corner of Dunn and Fourth streets with the beginning of a city park on the two Wabash lots.

The A. and P. Store on Main street, recently occupied by the Great Western Clothing Company, changed inside and out and given that concern's usual red front.

The exterior of the Electric Theater has been remodeled with brick matching that of the Missouri Theater and work is underway in re-decorating the interior. When the theater opens it will be practically a new building.

Theodore Gray, East Sixth street, is building a Colonial type residence which will contain six rooms and a bath, and will be modern in every respect. The house will be completed this summer. The house is being built on the lot occupied by the house which was partially destroyed by fire earlier this year.

Harry H. Mutz is building a Colonial type residence on Lawn avenue, and it is expected the house will be finished by the first of next year. It will contain nine rooms, bath and basement.

Mr. A. D. Saunders is living in his residence on East First street which was remodeled this spring.

J. O. Miller, who recently purchased the J. F. Montgomery lot on the west side of Dunn street between West Third and Fourth streets, will break ground soon for the construction of a new residence.

Mrs. Albert Watts is constructing two bungalows at the corner of Seventh and Walnut streets.

R. E. Allen, three miles east of Maryville, is now living in a new five-room bungalow, modern in every way with the exception of electric lights. The house contains basement and furnace.

Charley Foster is building a modern house on the corner of Seventh and Buchanan streets.

Other improvements made in the business section this spring were at the Kramer garage, Fifth and Market; the Robinson building occupied by Miss Keiflin's new shop; the G. M. C. restaurant, East Fourth street, damaged by fire; the north half of the Sturm building, Second and Main streets, which will be occupied by the Marshall Auto Supply company; I. E. Tulloch barber shop, North Main; and the building which will be occupied by Kuchs Brothers.

Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards of Oklahoma City, the widow of John Edwards, a former prominent attorney of Maryville, died at her home there last night. Mrs. Edwards was a direct descendant of Dennis Kunder, who was among the Quakers who settled at Germantown, Penn., in 1682, coming from Germany.

J. B. Robinson received a telegram this morning telling of Mrs. Edwards' death. It stated that the body will arrive in Maryville at noon Saturday. The funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The place had not been decided.

Mrs. Edwards is survived by three children, Miss Mary Edwards, E. D. Edwards and Arch Edwards, of Oklahoma City. All three children will come here for the funeral.

Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery where Mr. Edwards is buried. Mr. Edwards was a law partner of Lafe Dawson, the father of Judge John M. Dawson of Maryville.

ITALIAN FLAG IS TORN DOWN

INTERNATIONAL INCIDENT PRECIPITATED BY AUSTRIANS.

RERAISED WITH HONOR

Crown in Innsbruck, Enraged by Presence of Italians, Starts Demonstration, Which Continues.

Innsbruck, Austria, May 24.—Students, tearing down the flag from above the Italian consulate today, precipitated an international incident that threatened to become serious.

Because the flag was torn down, the Italian consulate demanded that it be restored with military honors.

At 1:30 p. m. a detachment of thirty Austrian soldiers, in command of a lieutenant, swung into action before the consulate building and raised the Italian flag ceremoniously from the top of the building.

The consulate personnel stood in the windows and gave the Fascist salute—arm extended upward and out straight from the shoulder—as the flag was hoisted.

A crowd, attracted by the incident, became enraged at the presence of the Italians, and began an anti-Italian demonstration that still was in progress late today.

The consulate is in the same building with the Cafe Munich. Its national flag was raised today in observance of the anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war.

A crowd of students, remembering that it was against their country that Italy—a member of the German-Austrian-Italian pre-war triple alliance—entered the war on the Allies side, gathered in the street before the building.

Their anger raised after they sang Nationalist and anti-Italian songs, the students decided to tear down the flag. One of them entered the cafe, climbed through a window, and pulled it down.

Police reserves arrived, rescued the flag, and restored it to consulate officials, who at once re-hung it.

THREE STATES TO BE VISITED

SENATE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE PLANS TRIPS FOR EVIDENCE.

OHIO, INDIANA FIRST

Then New York and Possibly West Virginia and California Will Be Scene of Hearings.

Washington, May 24.—The Senate campaign committee decided today to go to Ohio, Indiana, New York and possibly West Virginia and California, after Congress adjourns.

The trip to Ohio and Indiana will be taken immediately after adjournment.

After this dual inquiry, the committee will decide whether the West Virginia visit is warranted. If not, it will go direct to New York to further investigate the Hoover and Smith headquarters there.

The California investigation probably will be undertaken by Chairman Steiwer and Senator Bratton, New Mexico, on their way home after the other business has been cleaned up.

Adjournment Soon.

Adjournment now is scheduled for Tuesday. Steiwer said none of the details as to where hearings will be held in Ohio or Indiana have been arranged, but it is probable witnesses will be called to Columbus and Indianapolis.

The committee wants to ascertain expenditures made by county organizations for the candidates in those two states.

Meantime hearings will be resumed here. New witnesses have been named to the sergeant-at-arms for appearance tomorrow.

$612,262 Reported So Far.

The committee paused in its investigation today to take stock of the $612,262 of presidential expenditures listed so far, of which $471,594 has been spent by Republican candidates and $140,668 by Democrats.

The campaign expense of the Hoover-for-President organizations now totals $312,744, with some more expenses yet to be recorded.

The Gov. Al Smith Democratic workers are credited thus far with having spent $106,382, with more yet to come.

Other Republican candidates' expenditures:

Lowden of Illinois, $58,552; Watson of Indiana, $32,671; Curtis of Kansas, $11,568; Willis of Ohio, $56,159.

Other Democratic candidates' expenditures:

Reed of Missouri, $31,196; Walsh of Montana (retired), $1,190; Hitchcock of Nebraska, $1,744; George of Georgia, $156.

A list of more than 100 witnesses whose names have been mentioned in the inquiry has been prepared for Steiwer.

Gray-Haired Bandit Robs Bank of $1,000

Woman, 65, Only Employe of Poplar Bluff Institution Present, Can't Open Safe.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., May 24.—A gray-haired bandit held up the Butler county bank here at noon today and escaped with $1,100. Mrs. Henry Turner, 65, assistant cashier, was alone in the building, which is usually closed during the noon hour. The robber emptied the till and tried to force Mrs. Turner to open the safe.

She did not know the combination. When threats failed, the man walked from the bank and strolled away. Mrs. Turner was afraid to call assistance immediately, she said.

A PLANK FOR ENFORCEMENT

HARMONY PLATFORM IS PLANNED FOR DEMOCRATS.

SAY "AL" IS WRONGED

Smith Advocates No Infringement on 18th Amendment, Friends Say.—to Avoid Other Fights.

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Washington, May 24.—A harmony platform with a prohibition enforcement plank is being planned by Democratic leaders here for adoption at the Houston convention.

Authorities professing to speak for Governor Alfred E. Smith brought forward the suggestion unofficially and it has been taken up by many of the dry leaders of the party here. Smith's friends say his prohibition stand has been much misunderstood; that he advocates nothing to infringe upon the Eighteenth Amendment and that he has never preached nullification.

A strong law enforcement plank will meet the situation, the leaders here think.

Chief Point of Dispute.

If their plans carry, the chief point of dispute over the platform will be ironed out. Fights over the same question which developed in the San Francisco and New York conventions will be avoided. The harmony move started at the Jackson Day dinner here may be successfully concluded.

The Democrats are planning also to make an appeal to agricultural states by laying down a farm relief plank which may call into question President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill. While many Democrats voted against the bill, a strong majority of the party representatives in both the House and the Senate supported the measure.

There is some fear of a dispute over a plank concerning government control and operation of power projects. A wide split in party ranks in the Senate came on the Walsh resolution for a senatorial investigation of the so-called power combine. Senator George of Georgia, a presidential candidate, led the fight against Senator Walsh of Montana and was successful in his move to refer the investigation to the federal trade commission.

No Klan Fight Seen.

Thus far there has been no suggestion in any Democratic quarter here of reviving the fight over the anti-Klan plank which disrupted the convention in 1924. Most leaders believe the exigencies which brought about that fight have ended and that there is little possibility of reopening the question.

The other planks now in contemplation will contain denunciations of the Coolidge international policies, the Mellon fiscal policies and officials of the Republican party who were involved in the Teapot Dome investigation.

DELAY ON FARM VETO

AGRICULTURAL LEADERS DEFER ACTION TO TOMORROW.

OTHERS DISREGARDED

President Is Overridden on Four Measures.—Criticism Widely Voiced in Midwest.

Washington, May 24.—Farm bloc leaders decided today to delay until tomorrow any action on President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief measure.

The Senate agriculture committee, composed of bloc chiefs, met briefly but reached no decision as to whether an effort would be made to override the veto. It will meet again tomorrow.

Many farm bloc members believe they have insufficient votes to pass the bill over the veto and that it would be waste of time to force a vote. Others think that "it is due the producing sections of the country" to carry the fight on to a conclusion.

Private conferences will be held through the day in an effort to reach some agreement.

Meantime the veto message lies upon the Senate table ready to be called up for a vote or referred to a committee at any time.

Four Vetoes Overridden.

Washington, May 24.—The Senate within little more than an hour today overrode President Coolidge's veto on four bills. First it passed two vetoed postal bills, making them law, the only time except for the soldiers' bonus bill, that Congress had failed to heed his veto.

Then it passed the Oddie Indian lands road bill and a few minutes later the Tyson emergency officers retirement bill. The Oddie bill still must be acted on by the House.

The President finally was sustained when the vetoed army bandmasters grading bill failed to pass with the two-thirds although it got a majority, 44 to 32.

Bruce Pleads for President.

"A President's veto is entitled to some measure of respect in the Senate," Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, said before the final vote, pleading for defeat of the bill which would give army band masters an increased ranking.

Midwest Leaders Would Fight.

Chicago, May 24.—Middlewestern farm leaders, incensed by President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill, today today appealed to the agricultural classes to carry their fight for relief to the floors of the national party conventions.

Criticism of the chief executive's second refusal to sign the bill came from virtually every section of the farm belt. Some agricultural leaders predicted that the relief issue, as a consequence of Mr. Coolidge's action, would become the dominant one in the coming presidential campaign.

Governor Adam McMullen of Nebraska, Republican, was perhaps the most outspoken among those criticizing the veto. He urged "100,000 farmers to confront the Republican convention at Kansas City with a demand, as American freemen, for economic justice."

"We can expect no effective farm legislation from the present administration," said the Nebraska governor. "The time has come for action by farmers themselves.

Urges Appeal to Conventions.

"There is one place left to which the farmers may go—the conventions of the two major parties, where the people, instead of the classes, will be represented."

Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, whose candidacy for the Republican nomination is based on a pledge for agricultural relief, was reticent about Mr. Coolidge's action, but it is a foregone conclusion that his followers will lead the fight at the Kansas City convention for a farm relief plank in the Republican national plaform.

A week ago, when he returned from an eastern trip, the Illinois candidate said that farm relief was the most important political issue of the day and "unless the Republican party meets it squarely, I do not want the nomination."

Presidents of the Illinois Agricultural Association and the American Farm Bureau Federation issued caustic statements on the veto and accused the President of violating a pledge in the 1924 platform on which he was elected.

Mrs. M. E. Ford was a St. Joseph visitor today.

PRAISES FOR ANNUAL FETE

CROWD FAR IN EXCESS OF SEATING CAPACITY.

THE QUEEN CROWNED

Miss Gladys Somerville, Accompanied by Attendants, Create Picturesque May Setting.

The annual May fete held on the State Teachers College campus yesterday afternoon was one of expansiveness and elegance. A crowd far over-flowing the seating capacity witnessed what many considered the best and most artistic pageant ever presented here.

Gayly tinted costumes added greatly to the effect. The setting was ideal. The main building formed a background, and the green short-cropped grass, inclosed by the hedge following the walks to the side entrances completed the natural setting.

Miss Gladys Somerville, the queen, bedecked in white with a crown of white upon her hair formed the center of the picture, while to the left, and right of the throne, also robed in white, were her maids of honor, Lucile Sturm, Mary Fields, Sue Hankins, Hesterlynn Shipps and Alyce Hastings.

The Goddesses of the Earth, the Queen's trainbearers, and the flower girls, beautifully costumed, completed the picture.

The crowning of the queen with a dance by Miss Mary Henderson and Miss Mary Jo Dreyer was the opening flourish of the pageant.

Musical Numbers

Then came two musical numbers, a vocal solo, "May Morning," Danza, Miss Mary Fields, and "The Heavens Resound," Beethoven, College chorus.

The scheme of the festival was the offering of the Goddesses' Gifts of the Earth to the Queen of the May. Each of these came before the queen with a dance, always terminated with a pretentious bow and neat curtsey. The Goddesses were Miss Mary Goodpasture, Miss Hazel Sullivan, Miss Pauline Walker, Miss Vada Cliser, Miss Edith Moore and Miss Wilma Staples. Each had a position near the throne.

The first of the dances before the queen was with garlands of flowers, by the College high school girls.

Flame Dance.

Then followed an interesting motion in the dance of the Flames of Fire by College girls.

In quick succession, with no delay and perfect precision, came the dances of the other five gifts to close part one with a beautiful scene, The Queen's Garden, in which all the participants gathered in mass array. To feature the act, the Goddesses of the Earth, presented one of the most attractive movements of the whole affair in the dance with gold colored balls which were thrown into the air to the rhythm of music played by the band. Everything was carried through with grace and beauty.

A mass drill to the strains of martial music by the band opened the second part. This was one of the most clever of all the dances or drills, each girl carrying a green-wound wand, and marching in close order to the middle of the enclosure where a military command began a quick succession of maneuvers, which was pleasing. In formation covering the entire enclosure, the drill was climaxed with a flourish of wands to the strains of a lively number by the band.

Following this drill came the English Ribbon Dance by College girls which was a delightful gesture to the Queen.

The finale of the whole event was the winding of eight May poles, each of which was fitted with different color strands. While the band beat out the final strains, the winding was gracefully done which ended in the intertwining of the many colored strands tightly against the pole.

Then as the music again was heard the Queen and her courtiers slowly left the scene and the May fete was at an end.

Dr. Edith J. Saxman of the physical education department was in charge of the whole affair. She was assisted by Miss Helen M. Barton also of the physical education department. Student aides were: Miss Margaret Putnam, Miss Opal Spohn, Miss Martha Brandt, and Miss Ruth England.

Pianists for the different dances and songs were Miss Marjorie Braun, Miss Agnes Kennedy and Miss Mildred Stuessi.

Practically every department in the College and practically every faculty member has lent a helping hand. Special mention should go to the Fine and Industrial Arts departments and to C. H. Withington of the biology department, who helped in the decorating.

To Let Editor Rule on Protested Game

John H. Sewell, president of the Northwest Missouri baseball league, said today that he would let the sports editor of the Kansas City Star make a decision regarding the protested game Sunday between Stanberry and Albany at Stanberry.

The game was called in the eighth inning and the umpire forfeited it to Albany because of an alleged violation of the rules. Lloyd Lisle was coaching on first base for Stanberry. He was ordered off the field by the Albany umpire and he refused to leave. Stanberry protested to Mr. Sewell, claiming that Lisle was acting only in the capacity of a spectator, not having been signed by Stanberry. According to the rules, all players in the league must be signed five days previous to the game. Lisle's brother, Faye, was on the mound for Stanberry, which was leading, 3 to 1, when the game was forfeited.

Costumes for "Twelfth Night" Bewilder Seniors in the Cast

The costumes for "Twelfth Night," the senior class play of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, which will be presented Saturday night, have been received from Theo Liben and Son of Omaha. Costumes for all the characters were included in the assortment. The duke is to be dressed in the finest of that period. The countess wears one of the most gorgeous costumes ever seen on a stage in Maryville. The apparel for the knights, ladies, pages, and policemen costumes in complete in every detail.

Miss Blanche Dow and Miss Gladys Criswell, who are directing the play, are very well pleased with the appearance the players make.

Wednesday night was the first dress rehearsal. The difficulties encountered in putting on costumes by members of the cast were amusing. Most of the characters have to get into tights and some of the coats for the men button up the back. There were some things which the members of the cast were in doubt as to what it should be used for but finally each article found a place and after putting on wigs the actors finally emerged on the stage feeling of themselves to see if they had everything on.

Faculty members from the other teachers colleges of Missouri will be guests of the College at the senior play and twenty-five seats have been reserved for them.

The new scenery received from the Kansas City Scenic Studio company has been set up and is now in working order. It gives a true Shakespearian atmosphere.

Miss Olive S. DeLuce, assisted by Jesse Michaelson, have been working on the lighting effects. A large number of new lights have been installed and the effects which they produce are a notable improvement over any production given by a purely College cast.

Liquidation of Two Banks Nearing End

To Complete Work at Hopkins and Parnell by August, Deputy Commissioner Says.

Liquidation of the Bank of Hopkins and the Parnell Bank will be completed by August, Deputy Finance Commissioner Frank H. Barrett has informed the Hopkins Journal. Mr. Barrett said that after the affairs of these two banks are closed he and his family will move back to Skidmore, where he is interested in the Barrett Mercantile company.

Mr. Barrett said that another dividend will be declared by the Hopkins bank, but he would not promise how much it will be. The fixtures of both of the banks are to be sold and as soon as the rooms of the Bank of Hopkins are vacated the Midwest Telephone company will occupy the building, having purchased it some time ago.

Sargent Moves to the White House

Attorney-General Advises President on Bills Passed in Congress' Last Minute Rush.

Washington, May 24.—Attorney-General Sargent has temporarily moved his office to the White House, where he is advising President Coolidge on the legality and advisability of signing or vetoing the last minute rush of bills.

The largest remaining piece of legislation likely to reach Mr. Coolidge is the tax reduction measure now in conference. Unless this bill is pared down to a limit of $210,000,000, a veto is said to be likely.

A great mass of other bills have been caught in the last minute jam in the House and Senate but many of varying importance will be rushed through and will be allowed to go over without action.

Among the important measures that will probably be left out are Muscle Shoals and Boulder Dam legislation.

Final Grain Review.

Chicago, May 24.—Continued reports of dry weather over the entire belt sent wheat sharply higher on the board of trade today. Profit taking failed to stop the upturn. Corn gained fractionally with wheat and oats also showed advances.

At the close wheat had gained 3-5 to 1⅜ cents; corn ranged ⅛ to ½ cent higher; oats were ¼ to ⅝ cent higher, provisions were higher.

Continued reports of dry weather over the Canadian and American Northwest wheat belts were received today, together with forecasts for a similar condition for the next twenty-four hours at least. Good buying by commission houses developed during the session, with orders from Minneapolis and Winnipeg confirming the belief that conditions are serious on both sides of the boundary line. Some export business, mostly Manitobas and Durum was reported but no figures were given. The cash market, with receipts of 18 cars was half to one cent higher.

Sentiment in corn was affected by the bearish reports of good growing conditions, and the bullish reports of dwindling stocks and a strong cash market. Trading was quiet. The cash market was unchanged to ¼ cent higher. Receipts were 162 cars.

There was no news of significance in oats and fundamentally bullish sentiment prevailed. The cash market was ⅛ to 1 cent higher with receipts of 35 cars.

CIRCLES OVER NORTH POLE

DIRIGIBLE SAILS FOR AN HOUR OVER WORLD'S TOP.

NO LANDING IS TRIED

Bad Weather Prevents Ground Observations.—Italian Flag and Cross Dropped.

Copenhagen, May 24.—The dirigible Italia circled for an hour over the North Pole, according to advices received here today.

After making the one hour's observations General Umberto Nobile gave orders that the ship return immediately to its base at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, May 24.—An aircraft again has sailed over the summit of the world, and General Umberto Nobile, who circled the North Pole shortly after midnight last night, is en route to his base here.

The Italia reached the North Pole at 12.25 a. m.

For a few minutes it circled, as the definite location of the pole has not been determined and Nobile wanted to make sure his dirigible passed over the exact spot.

Then an Italian flag, a cross blessed by the Pope, and guide ropes were dropped.

None of Crew Landed.

The Italia did not land any of her crew at the pole. General Nobile had planned to drop Felice Trojani, inventor of a special landing apparatus, and meteorologist Finn Malmgren, but radioed that conditions made a landing inadvisable.

Gen. Nobile kept the Italia cruising in the polar vicinity for two hours. Then the trim dirigible, its sides coated with ice, started back toward civilization.

The Italia was expected at Kings Bay at Midnight tonight.

He had visited the spot that only a few men before him had visited. He was on one of the former expeditions with Roald Amundsen and like Amundsen circled the area just to be sure the exact spot had been reached.

This flight to the North Pole climaxed Nobile's series of maneuvers through the northern skies.

Last of Three Tours.

He flew to the north from Italy a few weeks ago, announcing three tours. The first was unsuccessful.

The second was a 68-hour cruise over the frozen waste lands that circle the pole.

The third resulted in this visit to the pole proper.

Bad weather endangered this last flight just as almost every flight since the Italia left Italy had been handicapped. Starting out at 4:25 a. m., Wednesday morning Nobile headed for North Greenland.

The first part of the tour was reported excellent. Then apparently bad weather set in. Major Valini at Vadsoe, Norway, reported he had received word that the big dirigible was fighting poor flying conditions.

Refuses to Halt.

The dirigible was reported sailing up the coast of Norway and Valini said he had been advised to stand-by to receive the Italia should Nobile decide to land.

But the Italia's pilot was not to be discouraged. He continued fighting the poor flying weather and finally came reports to the base here that the Italia had proceeded over the north of Greenland at 6 p. m., Wednesday night. Thence the Italia took a direct course to the pole.

Apparently conditions at the pole were not good for the expedition Nobile had planned. Before leaving Kings Bay he announced that when the pole was reached he would descend and that probably two members of his crew—a meteorologist and an engineer—likely would descend with him.

They intended to make careful observations at the pole.

All of this plan, however, depended upon the weather, and advices received here indicated there had been no attempt to land any of the Italia's party.

2½ cups of flour.
3½ teaspoons of baking powder.
Whites of 4 eggs.
Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, the milk and the flour, sifted with baking powder. Fold in egg whites which have been beaten stiff. Steam thirty-five minutes in buttered cups; turn out of molds and serve with fresh crushed strawberries, sweetened with sugar, and top with whipped cream.

NORRIS' VICTORY.

Has it occurred to you that Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, is a pretty able sort of fighter?

Shortly after the World War the question of what to do with the government's big plant at Muscle Shoals arose. Nearly everyone took it for granted that it would be turned over, at a heavy sacrifice, to private interests; nearly everyone, that is, but Senator Norris. He decided that there was no sense in accepting a loss, and began to fight for government operation.

Almost single-handed he prevented the private interests from getting the plant. Year after year he introduced in the senate a bill for government operation; year after year he was thoroughly beaten. But he perserved. And now he has won.

The senate has passed his bill; the house, with a few alterations, has also approved it. When a joint agreement is reached the bill will go to the president, who is expected to approve it.

The aged Nebraska senator, you must admit, is quite a fighter.

FATE AND BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Sometimes the kindest thing fate can do for a man is end his life at the right moment.

That thought is provoked by the fact that a new highway will soon be opened through the Maine woods into Canada and Quebec. It follows the route taken by Benedict Arnold and his troops during the revolution, when the Americans made a gallant but futile effort to capture Quebec, and it will be a kind of memorial to Benedict Arnold.

Now Arnold is not remembered in American history as a hero. His name is execrated beyond all others; it stands for the very incarnation of treachery and faithlessness. He is, pre-eminently, the villian in the American story.

Yet, prior to that time he turned traitor, Arnold had served the American cause faithfully and well. He had repeatedly displayed the utmost personal bravery on the field of battle; the fact that the attack on Quebec failed was in no way due to any fault of his, for he distinguished himself on that occasion by his daring, skillful leadership.

At Saratoga, Arnold again did the cause of independence a great service. In the thick of the fighting, he led his troops in an irresistible rush, finally falling, seriously wounded. And right there is where fate did him a bad turn.

If Benedict Arnold's wound at Saratoga had been fatal—if he had died on the field of battle—he would be enshrined today as one of our greatest heroes. The name, Benedict Arnold, instead of being a symbol of treachery, would stand for all that was brave and honorable. His descendants would glory in the name of Arnold; there would be statutes to him, and the history books would link his name with the names of other Revolutionary celebrities.

It has often been said that Lincoln died at the right time, as far as his own reputation was concerned. He was at the very summit of his fame. The Civil War had been won, and the old antagonisms had been forgotten. Had he lived a few years longer he would have been plunged into the hatreds of bitterness of the reconstruction period; doubtless he would have acquired many enmities and suffered greatly in popularity. His death was the natien's loss, but, in a sense, his own gain.

What a pity that fate could not have been equally kind to Arnold!

THE POWER OF BOOKS.

There never was a line in the world's history when so many books were being published as today. Every week sees new announcements; booksellers' shelves groan under the weight of the never-ending flood.

Probably 75 per cent of the books that are being produced might just as well have stayed unwritten. A tremendius amount of utter trash is being printed. Yet, for all that, the unprecedented spread of the "reading habit" in this country is a highly significant fact.

Books, bad ones as well as good ones, are often more important and powerful than the casual reader dreams. Books have helped to pull down governments, to bring wars, to effect vast changes in soical, economic and political institutions. A public that is eager for reading matter, as the American public is today, is a public that is eager for new ideas. And a public that is constantly looking for and absorbing new ideas is not going to remain static and content.

In the old kingdom of France, at the time of the American revolution, there was an abundance of surface serenity. King Louis XVI was popular with the people and the royal power apparently was as secure as at any time in its centuries of existence. Court circles never suspected that they were on the verge of an overturn.

But throughout the peaceful years certain Frenchmen were writing books, and every Frenchman who could lay hands on them was reading them. Voltaire and Rousseau were scoffing at the pretentions of royalty and asserting the right of the common man to freedom and a voice in his government. France absorbed them, and the serenity of the throne was silently but effectively undermined.

Thus, when a governmental crisis arose a few years later—the sort of crisis that had never before been anything but a temporary nuisance—the country cracked open and the French revolution swallowed up throne, king and court forever.

Such is the power of books. A people that reads extensively is not in danger of stagnation or decay. The constant spread of new ideals is liberty's best safeguard.

America today is pre-eminently a reading nation. The flood of books is ever increasing. That fact ought to be sufficient answer to the pessimists who see us slipping into forgetfulness of our old heritage.

What Other Editors Say

Methodists Would Get Together.

Renewal of efforts at reunion of the two branches of Methodism of the United States is interesting both because of the spirit in which it is undertaken and of the background of the movement. It is apparent from developments at the Methodist Episcopal general conference here that previous failure in this enterprise is to be disregarded. There is much in the history of the reunion movement to support that attitude; and it does not seem improbable that success may be atained before many more years have elapsed.

The interesting friendliness of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal church, South, as exemplified in the conference and in relations of churches of each body in and about Kansas City and other parts of the country lends encouragement to the hope that differeinces of long standing may be reconciled. No strictly sectionalline divides the churches, which were separated over the question of slavery. In various parts of both the South and North each body is represented. The two general conferences have interchanged fraternal delegates, and the two branches have shown a disposition to act together in other matters. Organic union has been effected in Japan, and reunion has been under serious consideration in this country for more than a decade.

Conferences of the northern branch of the church a few years ago voted overwhelmingly for reunion, and a majority of the conferences in the South favored the step. But the required three-fourts vote was not obtained in the latter section.

The explanation has been that some adherents of the church in the South have feared that the northern division, being stronger numerically, might exercise control of legislative policies and that it was, in some respects, too liberal in its doctrines. Differences also have persisted over the status of Negro members, particularly bishops, of the church.

Troublesome as these obstacles may be, it does not seem in the light of recent developments that they are insuperkable.—Kansas City Star.

THE WORST MENACE.

(Arthur Schnitzler in Vanity Fair Magazine.)

It is not the stupid who constitute the worst menace to the welfare of humanity but the large class of shrewd people who, without actually lying or deceiving, have the happy faculty of permitting lapses in thought when there is some advantage or convenience to be gained by not thinking, much as one switches off a light when he wishes to darken a room.

The Campaign Log

MAY 24

By United Press

Supporters of Governor Smith in the Democratic state convention in Texas threatened a revolt over the action of Governor Dan Moody who put through a resolution providing an examination of all candidates for delegates to the Houston convention to see if they were nautral. Smith supporters had claimed delegates from 12 congressional districts favored the New York Governor.

George K. Morris, Republican state chairman in New York, said both Theodore Roosevelt and Hamilton Fish, jr., had confessed with him relative to getting support of the New York delegation as vice presidential candidates.

Governor Adam McMullen, Repn., Nebraska, in a statement on the presidential veto of the McNary-Haugen bill urged "100,000 farmers to confront the Republican convention and demand economic justice." Frank O. Lowden, presidential candidate on a farm relief platform, reaffirmed his position in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill "until a better method of farm relief is produced."

A harmony platform with a strong law enforcement plant, was said to be planned by Democratic leaders in Washington. It was understood that Smith followers had brought forward the proposal for such a national platform.

The campaign investigation committee met in executive session today to go over testimony already received. The testimony shows Republicans have spent $471,574 and Democrats $140,668 in various primary campaigns.

This and That

"Red" Wilson at the Maryville Drug Company is exhibiting a chair inside of a bottle. A. Behop, a resident of the I. O. O. F. home at Liberty, makes the chairs in the bottles. The maker is 75 years old. He was a carpenter by trade, but went to the home when he suffered a broken back. He gives the proceeds from his work to the home. He also makes puzzles.

"Guilty on the tomatoes, but not guilty on the golf."

That was the verdict of M. A. Peery upon reading the article in yesterday's Democrat-Forum about his bet with Dr. Jesse Miller on who would have ripe tomatoes first. Dr. Miller stated that he not only had tomatoes first, but that he let Mr. Peery beat him at golf before taking him down to show him his "Withington" tomatoes.

"Why that son of a gun never did beat me at golf," Mr. Peery declared.

Vare Now Plays Role of President Maker

Political Talk Has It That Mellon Had to Endorse Hoover Against His Will.

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer.

Washington, May 23.—Probably the funniest thing that has developed in this political campaign is the distinct likelihood that the Hon. William Scott Vare of Philadelphia will be credited in the pages of history as the president-maker of 1928.

Perhaps it's not so funny after all. Perhaps Mr. Vare is just being made an instrument of Divine Providence, for, as everyone knows, the Almighty works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform.

It's the same Mr. Vare, of course, who runs that notorious political machine in Philadelphia and who wasn't considered sweet and clean enough to be allowed to enter the Senate.

Gave Mellon Licking.

Now this is how Mr. Vare enters the picture as a president-maker:

Inveterate readers of these dispatches will recall that many months ago, when people first began to wonder who was Andrew Mellon's presidential choice and to assert that Mellon would hold the balance of nominating power, your correspondent irreverently suggested that Andy couldn't get to first base with a candidate unless he first enlisted the support of Mr. Vare. Someone, it was suggested, ought to find out what Mr. Vare was thinking, for it seemed very likely that Mr. Vare would be able to tell Mellon just whom Mellon was going to support.

Mr. Vare and his Philadelphia machine had beaten Mellon and his machine when Mr. Vare decided in 1926 that he would be senator instead of George Wharton Pepper, the Mellon incumbent and candidate. The Mellon machine had to seek a truce quickly. It was able to promise Mr. Vare much help where he needed it worst when it appeared that the Senate doubtless would refuse to let him in after his election.

Mr. Vare agreed to play ball and Senator David A. Reed, the Mellon senator who had said so many extremely mean things about the uncouth Mr. Vare in the primary campaign, was forced to break his neck trying to get Mr. Vare in.

No senator ever had such a distasteful task, but his heart was in it, for Mr. Vare threatened to run for Reed's seat if the Mellon crowd didn't help him out.

Had to Endorse Hoover.

At any rate Mellon obviously had to divide political control of Pennsylvania with Boss Vare with the threat that Boss Vare might squeeze him out entirely almost any old time. Vare, meanwhile, knew that the Mellons would try to unhorse him sooner or later if he didn't beat them to it. When Reed failed to save his Senate seat, he was free to do as he pleased.

Along came the recent Pennsylvania state convention. Politicians all over the country waited breathlessly to see whether Mellon would say anything about the presidential candidates. The fact is, he had no idea of doing anything of the sort—his prepared speech mentioned no candidate.

But on the ground he discovered that Boss Vare had managed to rig the convention against him. Perhaps the convention, endorsing Hoover, and was prepared to pass it, as one apparently good source has it.

At any rate there is no doubt at all that Mellon found Boss Vare and his pals possessed of a whip hand. They were all set to grab his leadership whether by the simple expedient of coming out for the popular Mr. Hoover or by other means. The old boy, having no candidate of his own ready to trot out—since Coolidge and Hughes had failed him—was in no position to fight. He was simply pushed into an endorsement of Hoover. All informed persons seem to agree on that.

CAN'T HANDLE THE BUSINESS

RAVENWOOD CREAMERY HAS TO GET ANOTHER PASTEURIZER.

PLATTE VALLEY PRIDE

Mrs. E. C. Curfman's Choice for Name of Butter Is Selected.—Ship 5,000 Pounds Today.

"We're getting double the cream we expected," J. S. Casteel, president of the Ravenwood Co-operative Creamery, said this morning, indicating that the new project at Ravenwood is experiencing a healthy business right from the start. The creamery was opened May 1 and is the first co-operative creamery enterprise in Nodaway county.

Mr. Casteer said that the butter made there has been given the name of "Platte Valley Pride." The name was submitted by Mrs. E. C. Curfman of Maryville in a contest the opening day and the Maryville woman received the $5 prize offered by the board of directors. The creamery is making arrangements now to have the cartons printed with this name.

Shipments are made each Thursday to the Chicago market, and Mr. Casteel said that today's shipment was 5,000 pounds. The first price for cream was 48 cents, he said. The price is fixed every two weeks, based on the Chicago market. The Hunter-Walton company of Chicago has bought all the tub butter to date.

The creamery started out with only two routes, and three more have been added. The customers now total more than 200. The cream routes go as far east as Gentry and even to Pickering. Further arrangements will have to be made regarding the exact routes the truck drivers take in collecting cream. Mr. Casteel said the creamery wants cream direct from the farm.

Regardless of the fact that the routes are covered every other day, a great deal of the cream is brought direct to the creamery by the farmers.

Because of the unexpected size of the business the Ravenwood creamery will have to increase its capacity, only a month after it was started and Mr. Casteel said that negotiations were being made now for the purchase of another pasteurizer.

George Hemshrot, the butter maker, who originally planned to churn only every other day, has been forced to churn every day. It was said that all the cream could not be handled with only three churns a week.

Hollywood, Calif., May 24.—The gypsy dance is to be placed before the public by Dolores Del Rio, Mexican film star, in her forthcoming picture, "Revenge."

The actress has been studying the dance under Serge Oursinksy, ballet master.

Native dances have been featured by Miss Del Rio. In "Ressurection," she mastered Russian steps and in "Ramona," she used her own native dances.

Louis Wolheim will play a featured characterization in "The Innocent," Vilma Banky's first independent starring picture.

The actor played the role of a beer baron in "The Racket," underworld drama.

When Janice Chapin cried before the camera there was no glycerine used. Janice took a character bit in "The Perfumed Trap." She is one-year-old, and the cameramen had to wait long for the tears, but when they came they were real.

Bebe Daniels plays the part of a news reel camera in her new Paramount picture, "Hot News."

Patsy Ruth Miller has started work on "Marriage of Tomorrow," a picture of companionate marriage. Lawrence Gray will be her film companion.

FASHION NOTE—The "Casanova" turban, inspired by the estimable gentleman of some centuries ago who prided himself on his love affairs is Hollywood's latest in chapeaux.

An entire scene was enacted by Mary Duncan in "The Four Devils" by the use of her hands alone. "There is drama in the use of the hands," the star said. "No one would mistake the significance of the clenched fist. The hand extended with the palm upward is an inviting gesture of friendliness, while the palm down carries an opposite meaning."

King George Is Marksman.

London, May 24.—King George, noted for his marksmanship in hunting game, added to his reputation as a gunner when he fired at a target from a tank at the Lulworth Gunnery School.

The King hit the target the first time and scored a bull's eye on the second shot. He was firing at 600 yards.

Poultry Business Grows.

Kennett—Growth of the poultry business in Dunklin County is indicated by the fact that one firm of this city bought 69,786 pounds of poultry for $13,155 during the twelve-month period from May 9, 1927, to May 9, 1928.

BUG INFESTS GRUNDY CORN

FARMER NEAR TRENTON REPORTS DESTRUCTION BY PEST.

PROBABLY BILL BUG

No Effective Remedy Is Known, But Hand Picking Can Be Used in Small Tracts.

(Trenton Times-Republican)

G. F. Mack, a farmer living out of Trenton on route six, reported a few days ago to Carl Roda that a bug was infesting a field of corn on a piece of sod ground. The bug has been doing considerable damage to corn which was planted on ground that was plowed this spring.

A letter from the Department of Entomology at the State University at Columbia states that the damage is probably being done by the bill bug. There are two sects of these beetles, one about the size of the larger one, which is about a half inch long and a quarter of an inch wide. They have a rather prominent snout, as the name would lead one to suspect, and by means of this snout with the jaws at the tips they bore holes in the stems and in the leaves of the young plants. Where they bore in to the stem near the bud the injury shows up later when the plants open as a chain of round holes running across the leaf. When abundant they may practically kill every plant in the heavily infested portions of the field. They have already ruined one stand of corn and they usually continue to feed quite a little while though, as a rule, corn knee high does not continue to suffer seriously from it. Most of the forms in this part of the country which attack corn normally lay their eggs and breed in the base of larger hedge grasses or water grasses rather than in the corn itself. They will before long, therefore, seek for such plants in which to oviposit. Except in the case of the one known as the corn bill bug which may breed in corn, the others cease to attack corn after egg laying begins.

Unfortunately there is no effective remedy for one cannot poison them and collecting them by hand is slow and expensive work. Hand picking can be resorted to, however, when they are abundant over a small acreage.

Where the stand is ruined rework ground and in a week or ten days replant. Many of the bugs will have left the field in the mean time.

Hints and Helps for Farmers

by J. Ross Fleetwood County Extension Agent

Urges to Keep After Moth.

For the past two years the codling moth has been especially serious. In this section of the state, previously, two or three sprays have proven effective against them.

However, during the past two seasons they have been so bad that it was difficult to control them at all without breeding cages to secure the emergence date and thus apply the sprays at the proper time to secure control. Due to the rather poor set of apples, many people will be tempted to discontinue spraying this year. This will undoubtedly be a mistake for not only should the apples left be of good quality this year but if spraying is not continued this year a larger number of moths will live over to give trouble next year. Individual breeding cages are of course best but for those who do not maintain cages of their own the Missouri College of Agriculture is maintaining breeding cages in each district and as soon as the moths emerge in a district those interested will be notified in time to apply their sprays. Anyone interested in these dates should leave their names at this office as soon as possible.

About Big Ten Mixture.

A great many people are asking about the feeding of the big ten mixture to spring pigs. This is John Evvard's mixture about which there has been so much written about recently. This mixture was designed for dry-lot feeding and Mr. Evvard does not recommend it for summer feeding on grass. As I have said before there is no better corn supplement for summer feeding on pasture than tankage fed in the ratio of tankage 1 part, corn 20 parts, or ½ gallon to each bushel of corn fed. When the price ratio is not too wide some shorts added to the above may increase the rate of gain.

Bonemeal for Cows.

When a dairy cow is on pasture and her milk flow is likely to be stimulated to the maximum and the amount of dry feed fed at the minimum, she is likely to need minerals more than at any other time. She, of course, should have salt at all times but in addition she needs phosphorus. It is well known that our soils are becoming deficient in phosphates since acid phosphate gives such good results when used as a fertilizer. When our soils are low in this element the feeds which a cow eats are likely to be deficient as well. This can easily be taken care of by feeding 1 to 3 per cent steamed bonemeal in her regular feed. Generally 1 pound to each 100 pounds of feed will be sufficient but as much as 3 pounds to each 100 pounds may be fed. Some people have tried feeding the regular fertilizing bonemeal and found that the cows will not eat it. The feeding bonemeal can be secured direct from the packing houses if not handled by your local dealers. Quite a number of the meal order houses also handle it. Be sure to insist on feeding bonemeal.

Inoculate Soybeans.

Soybeans planted on ground which has never grown inoculated soybeans before should be inoculated. No other crop will inoculate for soybeans as they have a bacteria of their own. Soybeans for seed and hay may be planted sometime between now and June 1 as an optimum with July 1 as the latest date possible for maturing even for hay.

Free Seed Inspection.

Anyone interested in either wheat or oat inspection for seed certification should apply at this office now. There promises to be quite a demand for certified wheat this fall and if you have some real good wheat it might pay to have it inspected. There are no costs attached to the inspection unless the seed is certified when a small charge is made.

Cultivation of Soybeans.

Soybeans may be harrowed until they are 4 to 5 inches high. If this is done beginning on the third or fourth day after planting and continued often enough to keep down weeds for two to three weeks after the crop comes up, the damage from weeds will be cut to a minimum. A common farm harrow should be used. The cultivation, however, should not be done while the leaves are wet following a dew or showers.

This must be Clean Up—Paint Up Week, judging by some of the flappers who passed the office today.

Leading High School Bands Open Contest

Young Musicians Vie for National Honors at Joliet, Ill.—Sousa to Judge.

Joliet, Ill., May 24.—More than a score of bands from many sections of the country will contest for national high school band honors here today, tomorrow and Saturday.

Among the contestants in this, and third annual national contest, will be the Joliet High School band, winner of first place in the second contest at Council Bluffs, Ia., last May.

Missouri will be represented by Joplin High School, champion of the state.

The national contests are outgrowths of state school band contests, which have been held annually since 1924 under the auspices of the Committee on Instrumental Affairs of the Music Supervisors' National Conference. The first national contest was held in 1926 with 13 entries. In 1927 there were 23 entries.

Sousa to Judge.

So much interest has been shown in these contests that prominent authorities have agreed to act as an Advisory Committee. John Philip Sousa is chairman of this committee.

The committee's contests are open to four classes of participants, who will compete among themselves but not with each other.

Class A is for bands from schools, public or private, having enrollments of 400 or more. Class B is for bands from schools with less than 400 students or larger schools in which the bands have not been organized longer than two years.

Class C is for bands from Junior high schools, grammar schools and private schools below senior high school age. Class D includes all schools, high school or grammar, in which the bands have been organized less than one year.

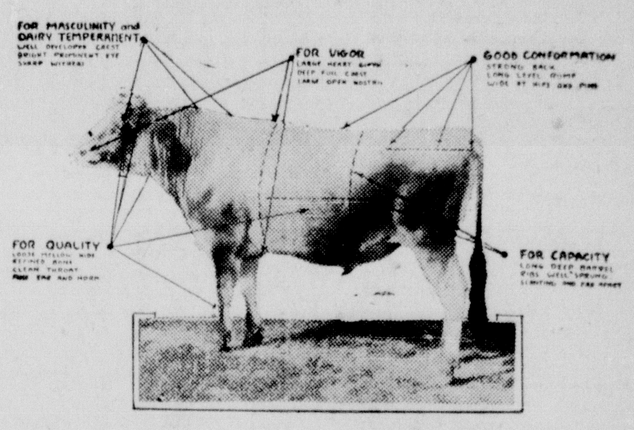
Bull Associations Building Up State Dairying Industry



Selection of the right type of dairy bull to build up Missouri dairying is forcibly emphasized by the rapid growth of bull-block associations in the state and the replacement of scrub bulls with purebreds. A growth of more than 100 per cent has been made just in Missouri during the past two years, according to A. J. Meyer, director of the agricultural extension service of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

The number of associations has increased from 12 to 29, and the number of blocks or communities included in these has increased from 48 to 100.

The number of members increased from 320 to 502, and the number of cows owned by members grew from 2100 to 3661.

By the end of the two-year period, 100 purebred bulls were in use in 100 communities. The production records of the dams of these 100 bulls average nearly 600 pounds of butterfat a year. These bulls have replaced 353 inferior bulls on the farms of members and their neighbors who are now using the association bulls.

The average purchase price of these high-type dairy bulls was $218 a head, yet the 502 members of Missouri bull block associations will be enabled to use these bulls for six or eight years at an average investment of only $40.36 per member or $5.79 per cow.

Bull associations are proving the best and most practical means of establishing community breeding centers in Missouri. In counties where they are operating, the surplus purebred bull calves are rapidly taking the place of scrubs. In fact, 409 purebred bulls were placed through the influence of the associations during the last two years, and of this number 224 replaced scrubs.

A typical dairy sire, a Jersey, is shown in the illustration with the points that are judged and evalued in selecting a dairy sire.

By ANNE AUSTIN, AUTHOR OF "SAINT AND SINNER"

THIS HAS HAPPENED

SALLY FORD, ward of the state orphanage from the time she is four, is "farmed out" to CLEM CARSON when she is 16. She meets DAVID NASH, athlete and student who is working on the farm for the summer. Carson makes remarks about David's friendship with Sally and the student strikes him a terrific blow.

Sally and David flee and join a carnival, David as cook's helper and Sally in a sideshow disguised as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer. NITA, Hula dancer, who knows the police are after the newcomers and who is infatuated with David, threatens to expose Sally if she doesn't keep "hands off" the young student.

The carnival goes next to Capital City, where Sally spent so many years in the orphanage. She successfully eludes detection under the disguise of the crystal gazer until one afternoon when the orphans troop in with their hostess, a beautiful woman who fascinates Sally. One of the children recognizes Sally and shouts her name, but GUS, the barker, comes to her rescue and diverts attention. Sally is surprised to see the beautiful "Lady Bountiful" stop and talk with a well-dressed, handsome Easterner who earlier in the afternoon has teasingly read Sally's fortune in the crystal and asked her to go to supper with him.

When a terrible storm blows up and the tent falls, Sally finds herself supported in the arms of the Easterner. He tells her he knows who she is and that the police are after her. When they are rescued, Sally learns that David and Nita are missing. Later that night, WINFIELD BYBEE calls everybody into his car and tells them his safe has been robbed. MRS. BYBEE accuses Sally and David, recalling that Sally one day saw her place money in the hidden safe. Sally pleads her and David's innocence and tells of Nita's menacing voice in the darkness and her conversation with the unknown man STEVE. Bybee says he will call in police. Sally begs him to wait and see if David returns. When someone suggests David is probably hurt or killed, Sally faints. When she comes to she goes alone in the darkness to find him. As day breaks she sees him staggering toward her over a little hill.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI.

Before she reached him Sally almost fainted with horror, for in the pale light of the dawn she saw that David's shirt about his left shoulder was soaked with blood. But his uninjured right arm was stretched out in urgent invitation, and his voice was hailing her gaily, in spite of his terrible weakness and fatigue.

"Dear little Sally!" he cried huskily, as his right arm swept her against his breast. 'Why aren't you in bed, darling? But I'm glad you're not! I've been able to keep plodding on in the hope of seeing you. Did you think I'd run away and left you? Poor little Sally!" he crooned over her, for she was crying, her frantic hands playing over his face, her eyes devouring him through her tears.

But you're hurt, David!" she moaned. "I knew you were hurt. I told them so! I was looking for you. I knew you hadn't run away."

"And she made us believe you hadn't, too," Pop Bybee panted, having reached them on a run, dragging his wife behind him. "What happened, Dave boy? Have a mix-up with the dirty crooks, did you?"

"Winfield Bybee, you are a fool!" Mrs. Bybee gasped, breathless from running. "Let the poor boy get his breath first. Here! Put your arm about him and let him lean on you. Sally, you run back to the train and get help. This boy's all done up and he's going to have that shoulder dressed before he's pestered to death with questions."

"I can walk," David panted, his breath whistling across his ashen lips. "I don't want Sally out of my sight. I—would—give up—then. Nothing much—the matter. Just a bullet—in my shoulder. Be all right—in a —day or two."

"Please don't try to talk darling" Sally begged, rubbing her cheek softly against his right hand and wetting it with her tears.

"Lean on me and take it easy," Pop Bybee urged, his voice husky with unashamed emotion. "And don't talk any more till we get you into a berth. God! But I'm glad to see you, Dave boy! I'd made up my mind I'd never trust another man if you'd thrown me down. But Sally didn't doubt you a minute. Kept me from telling the police that you'd been with the show and had disappeared with the crooks."

"Thanks," David gasped, leaning heavily on the showman. "I was scared sick—the police—had found Sally. Knew there was bound to be—an awful row."

He fainted then, his splendid young body crumpling suddenly to the cinders of the railroad track. Somehow the three of them managed to get him to the show train and into the Bybees' stateroom, where Gus, the barker, who had graduated from medical school before the germ of wanderlust had infected him, dressed the wounded shoulder.

"The bullet went clear through the fleshy part of the arm at the shoulder," Gus told them, as he washed his hands in the stateroom's basin. "No bones touched at all. Just a flesh wound. Of course he's lost a lot of blood and he'll be pretty shaky for a few days, but no real harm done. You can turn off the faucet, Sally. Save them tears for a big tragedy—like ground glass in your cold cream, or something like that. Want a real doctor to give that shoulder the once-over, Pop?" he asked, turning to Bybee, who had not left David's side.

It was David, opening his eyes dazedly just then, who answered: "No other doctor, please. I'm a fugitive from justice, remember. If I could have some coffee now I think I could tell what happened, Mr. Bybee."

A dozen eager voices outside the state room door offered to get the coffee from the privilege car, and within a few minutes Sally was kneeling before David, holding a cup of steaming black coffee to his lips.

As many of the carnival family as could crowd into the small space of the car aisle pressed against the open door of the stateroom to hear his story. Jan, the Holland giant(who was too tall to stand upright in the car, was invited into the stateroom, where he sat between Pop Bybee and Mrs. Bybee, "Pitty Sing" in the crook of one of his arms, Noko, the Hawaiian midget, in the other. Sally still knelt beside David, holding his right hand tightly in both of hers and laying her lips upon it when his story moved her unbearably.

"I suppose Mrs. Bybee has told you that I was leaving the show train to go to the carnival grounds to see if anything had happened to Sally. I'd have gone sooner, but the storm was so violent that I knew I'd not have a chance to get there. Mrs. Bybee said she was going to the lot and would look after Sally for me, but she wanted me to stay on the train, or near it, to patrol it. She didn't tell me there was a lot of money in her stateroom, or I'd have stationed myself in there."

"You see," Sally interrupted eagerly. "I told you I hadn't said a word to him about the safe."

"Safe?" David glanced down at her, puzzled. "So this Steve crook cracked a safe to get the money, did he? I didn't know—didn't have time to find out."

"And I told you it was a man named Steve!" Sally reminded them joyously, raising David's cold hand to her lips. "They thought I was making it all up, Dave, but they believed me after a while."

"I suppose Sally has told you that we saw Nita and some man walking in the moonlight that last night we were in Stanton," David addressed Pop Bybee. "We heard her call him Steve, and say something about what she'd do to him if he double-crossed her. I should have told you then, Mr. Bybee, but I didn't have an idea Nita was planning to rob the outfit, and anyway—" he blushed, his eyes twinkling fondly at Sally—"by morning I'd forgotten all about it. I couldn't think of anything but—but Sally. You see, we'd just told each other that night that—that—well, sir, that we loved each other and—"

"Anybody else in the whole outfit could have told you that," Bybee chuckled. "It'll all right, Dave. Carnival folks usually mind their own business and spend damn little time toting tales."

"I'm glad you're not blaming me," David said gratefully. "Well, sir, I was walking up and down the tracks, just wild to get away and see if anything had happened to Sally, when suddenly I heard a soft thud, like somebody jumping to the ground on the other side of the train. I crossed over as quick as I could, but by that time they were running down the side of the train pretty far ahead of me. It was Nita and a man. They must have been hidden on the train, waiting their chance, when the storm broke—were there when Mrs. Bybee left.

"I suppose they hadn't counted on any such luck; had probably intended to overpower her before you got back, sir, and the storm saved them the trouble."

"I'd have given them a run for the money," Mrs. Bybee retorted grimly, her skinny old hand knotting into a menacing fist.

"That's just what I did," David grinned rather whitely at her. "I yelled at them to stop, because I had an idea they'd been up to something, since they'd jumped off this car, and I knew Nita had no business on the train, since all you people were sleeping on the lot.

"They were carrying a couple of suitcases that looked suspiciously heavy to me. It flashed over me that Mrs. Bybee, being treasurer of the outfit, must have left a lot of money in her stateroom, and that Nita and this Steve chap had been planning to rob her when Sally and I heard them talking the other night. I started after them, still yelling for them to stop, and Steve turned and fired at me. He missed me, lucky for me, and I kept right on.

"About a hundred yards beyond the end of the train they climbed into a car that was parked on the road that runs alongside the tracks and after telling me goodby with another bullet that missed me, too, Steve had the car started. I was about to give up and start toward Capital City to notify the police when I noticed there was a handcar on the tracks, just where this spur joins the main line.

"I threw the switch and in a minute I had the handcar on the main line and was pumping along after them. The state road parallels the railroad track for five or six miles, you know, and I could make nearly as good time in my handcar as they could in their flivver, for it's a down grade nearly all the way." He paused, his eyes closing wearily as if every muscle in his body ached with the memory of that terrible ride in the dead of night.

"Better rest awhile, Dave," Pop Bybee suggested gently, bending over the boy to wipe the cold drops of sweat from his forehead.

"No, I'll get it over with," David protested weakly. "There's not much more to tell. They couldn't see me—had no idea I was trailing them in the handcar. But I could keep them in sight because of their headlights. I guess they'd have got away, though, if a freight train hadn't come along just then and blocked the road. They were just reaching the grade crossing where the state road cuts the railroad tracks when this freight came charging down on us—"

"But you, David!" Sally shuddered, bowing her head on his hand, the fingers of which curled upward weakly to cup her face. "You were on the track. Did the train hit you? Oh!"

"Of course not!" David grinned at her. "I'm here, and I wouldn't have been if the engine had hit the handcar when I was on it. But I'm afraid the railroad company is minus one handcar this morning. The cowcatcher of the freight engine scooped it up and tossed it aside as if it had been a baby's go-cart, but I'd already jumped and was tumbling down the bank into a nice bed of wildflowers.

"Pretty wet after the storm, so I didn't go to sleep. I'd jumped to the other side of the tracks and was hidden from Steve's car while the freight train rolled on. They didn't stop to hold a post-mortem over the handcar. Probably figured a tramp had been bumming a free ride on it and had got his, and good enough for him.

"When the train had passed I was waiting by the road for Steve's car. I guess he was pretty badly surprised when I hopped upon the running board and grabbed the steering wheel and swerved the car into a ditch, nearly turning it over. I don't remember much of what happened then, what with Nita screeching and Steve swearing and popping his gun at me. But somehow I managed to get his revolver—didn't know I'd been shot at first—and dragged him out of the car.

"It must have been a pretty good fight, for Nita decided to beat it before it was finished. She started off with one of the suitcases but it was too heavy and she dropped it in the road and lit out. If Nita could dance as well as she can run," David interrupted himself to grin at Bybee, "she'd be a real loss to the outfit."

"Well, Dave, even if Steve did get away with the money, my hat's off to you, boy," and he reached for the hand which Sally was still cuddling jealously.

"Who's telling this?" David demanded, with just a touch of boyish bravado, which made Sally love him better than ever. "He didn't get away. I'm afraid he won't be good for much for a long time. Nita should have stayed to look after him."

"The money, Dave!" Mrs. Bybee screamed. "You didn't save the money did you, Dave? Where are you, Winfield Bybee? I'm giving you fair warning! If he saved that money, I'm going to faint dead away!"

(To Be Continued)

David is afraid to take credit for his deed, so the glory is given to Eddie Cobb.

G. O. P. FEARS FARM PLANK

McNARY-HAUGEN FIGHT MAY DISRUPT CONVENTION.

WOULD HURT HOOVER

This Part of Platform Only One Arousing Discussion Before Kansas City Meeting.

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 24.—Republican authorities here are worried lest they drift into a convention fight over a McNary-Haugen bill plank in the platform. They see signs pointing that way.

President Coolidge yesterday vetoed the measure.

Last Saturday Frank Lowden, the midwestern candidate, indicated he was more interested in seeing the party take a new agricultural stand than he was in getting the nomination.

Opponents of Secretary of Commerce Hoover long have been using the fact that he, with Mr. Coolidge, is opposed to the equalization fee system of the McNary-Haugen bill. To both men the situation which develops at Kansas City can be vital.

Cost the Democrats.

It was just such a situation which disrupted the Democratic convention of 1924. William G. McAdoo and Governor Smith were the two leading candidates, like Hoover and Lowden. McAdoo had what was generally regarded as klan support. The Smith leaders followed the movement to put an anti-klan plank in the platform to make McAdoo's nomination impossible.

If the Lowden-Dawes-Watson faction can put a McNary-Haugen bill plank in the Kansas City platform, it will consider Hoover beaten. Even an open move to take such a step might be construed as an embarrassment to the Hoover candidacy.

The farm plank is the only one which is causing much discussion now, with the convention a little more than two weeks off. Some effort may be made to write a plank concerning activities of the power combine, but leaders think they can work out satisfactory solution of this question without great damage politically.

Borah May Start Fireworks.

Senator Borah of Idaho is understood to be drawing a plank concerning the action of Will Hays, former chairman of the Republican national committee in soliciting a $160,000 campaign contribution from Harry Sinclair, who leased the Teapot Dome naval reserves. Borah is planning to stage some fireworks in the convention and a contest is possible.

As for the other planks, they will be about as usual. A carefully phrased law enforcement plank on prohibition is expected to be adopted without contest from the wet element of the party. The world court and Mr. Coolidge's international policies will be endorsed, along with the fiscal policies of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Mae Murray Coming Back Into Filmdom

Enthusiastic Receptions Abroad Cause Decision to Return—News of Other Stars.

Hollywood, May 24.—After a retirement lasting almost two years, Mae Murray is to return to the screen. And this time her noted face and form will be seen in a picture of her own production.

Public demand and her natural desire for the kleigs form the basis for her reappearance on the silver screen, she says. She is producing her own picture because she thinks the experience will be amusing and because she believes she will do better work.

Since Mae Murray left the screen almost two years ago, she has spent a year and a half traveling with her titled husband, Prince M'Divani, and six months touring in vaudeville.

The receptions she received when she apepared in public abroad and the box office favor her vaudeville trip found dominated the decision to play again in pictures.

"I wanted to return just because I always have and always will like motion picture work," she says. "And when I found the public wanted me back as much as I wanted to come back, I made up my mind right away."

Miss Murray's picture is to go into production at once. It has not been titled but she favors either "Hungarian Rhapsody" or "Gold of Galt."

Alice Davenport, one of the pioneer comedy stars, an original member of the Mack Sennett company, returns to the screen in a series of comedies to be produced at Tec-Art studios.

Fred Thomson, the western star, seems gripped by history. Having recently completed "The Life of Jesse James," he is now working on "Kit Carson." Much of the action is to be filmed in Arizona.

Ronald Colman's first individual starring vehicle will be Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities." He will play the part of Sidney Carton. Coleman previously has been co-featured with Vilma Banky, the Hungarian actress.

Miss Banky, meanwhile, is working in "The Innocent." Louis Wolheim, who vies with Bull Montana as Hollywood's ugliest man, has one of the main supporting roles.

Bebe Daniels braves irate mothers at a baby show, a ship wreck, an auto race and other dangers in her new picture, "Hot News," in which she plays the part of a news reel camera girl.

Harry Langdon is making his last release for First National under his present contract.

"Hell an' Maria" Dawes Helps His Wife Choose Her Hats and Gowns

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series on prospective "First Ladies," by Allene Sumner, staff writer for Democrat-Forum and NEA Service. In this article, Miss Sumner discusses Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the vice-president.

By ALLENE SUMNER

Washington, May 24.—If Mrs. Charles Dawes, wife of the vice president, should be our next First Lady, her husband the president, would establish the length of the First Lady's reception gowns, to say nothing of gowns in general.

For all the intimates of the Dawes family declare that for years "Charles" has established his wife's hemline, and that they see no reason why even the White House would alter this custom.

There in a nutshell—or a tape measure—is perfect denial of a popular Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dawes myth which insists that "this frail little woman" winds the "Hell! Maria!" vice president about her little finger.

The vice president decides her skirt length, helps select her hats and gowns, decides which dinner invitations shall be accepted or refused and, in short, places Mrs. Dawes in about the same position as the Senate, over which he presides.

It's Okey With Her.

But—with a difference! He's at the helm in the Dawes menage by special request of Mrs. Dawes and because he and his wife are so almost completely in accord on all subjects that there's no chance for argument.

Mr. Dawes not only says that his wife's hemlines shall be nine or eight inches above the floor, but she says so herself. They are both conservatives—in dress, as well as politics.

"The main thing I demand in a woman is that she is not conspicuous," is a vice presidential epigram quoted by a close friend.

And Caro Dawes is certainly anything but conspicuous. "Retiring, shy, diffident and modest," are adjectives used in Washington social circles to describe her.

But here again the intimates call the "shy" story a myth.

"Mrs. Dawes is very much the Grande Dame," they will tell you. "Very conscious of her family and position and so serene in her own self-confidence that she does not feel the need of putting herself forward."

But to the stranger she certainly gives a vivid impression of almost a childlike diffidence.

At White House Reception.

I was passing down the White Housee receiving line one night when just as I stopped before the president and his wife I was attracted by a little flurry of impulsive beckoning hands behind the red rope where the special guests, the cabinet members and their wives, were assembled. A tiny little wren-like woman who seemed all big dark eyes and impulsive gesturing hands was signaling her pleasure at seeing someone in the line. It was Mrs. Dawes.

I had tea in her palatial home in Belmont street in the capital just a few days ago. Both the Evanston and Washington homes are solid, impressive, typical houses of a rich man. The Washington home is of cream stone and tops a leafy ravine into which the garden pours. They say that the vice-president took this particular house for the huge elm tree that falls over the side porch.

Dignity is perhaps the one word that best characterizes the Dawes home atmosphere. A butler stood at the open door like a graven image impassively extending his silver card tray.

Mrs. Dawes in beige lace and brown chiffon scarf, received in the living room doorway. Her smile and handclasp were pleasant and cordial but her "line" moved briskly and competently on into the rich-raftered huge living room with its maroon velvet draperies and upholstery, its club-size fireplace and its handsome oil paintings.

A recent portrait of Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the vice-president, who may be the next White House hostess.

The vice-president's study off the living room is the homiest room in the big mansion, barring, perhaps, the yellow cretonned sun breakfast porch. A copy of Ludwig's "Napoleon," a worn Bible, and a rich Moroccan-bound dictionary with a lone piece of fiction were upon the vice presidential desk. The "children's" pictures were there, too.

Two Adopted Children.

The "children" are the adopted two, Virginia, 14, and Dana, 16, and the grandchildren of the Dawes' only daughter, Mrs. Caroline Erickson of Evanston. The grandchildren are Charles, 3, and Caroline, 4. Rufus Fearing Dawes, a son, was drowned while attending college.

The children—her adopted daughters and her grandchildren—are the supreme interests of Mrs. Dawes' life. Many a senatorial lady with daughters finds herself at Mrs. Dawes' right or left by the vice president's wife's own request at various social affairs, and soon finds herself in a serious conversation with earnest Mrs. Dawes on the subject of daughter-rearing.

"Earnestness" is another characteristic of Mrs. Dawes. She measures everything with the yardstick of right or wrong, they say. She will not permit her name only to be used in a charitable cause, but she insists on doing work which money could not buy.

"Money cannot buy everything," she is quoted as saying. "I would have an uneasy conscience if I did not give myself to worthy causes."

They say she would as soon drink prussic acid as a cocktail and would no more smoke a cigaret than behead a baby.

A Charming Hostess.

But no hostess in Washington is more bountiful and more thoughtful of her guests' comfort. A thousand people must have streamed through her home this other afternoon, but for hours vast silver bowls of iced chocolate and coffee and tea were filled and refilled, hundreds of iced cakes and cream cheese sandwiches and bonbons were produced magically by the silvery-haired older women who are the Dawes servants.

The reputation which "Hell an' Maria Dawes" has fastened upon himself by his violent speeches worries his wife very much, close friends say.

Someone attended a dinner party not long ago at which the vice president announced loudly that he wanted a big cup of coffee with his dinner and none of these "nit-wit, peewee, demitasses after I'm all through and don't care whether I get it or not."

"Why, Charles!" Mrs. Dawes said, explaining aside that she did wish Charles would not be so publicly articulate with all his demands.

Dislikes "Hell an' Maria" Pose

Close friends say that Dawes has gotten stubborn about clinging to this "rough neck" reputation—which all began in one wild tirade of deliberately planned political swearing at a Senate hearing and was designed to attract public attention to his cause. In reality he is a gentleman and a most sensitive and delicately-percepted man, but he seems to take delight in his reputation.

Mrs. Dawes does wish that people would better understand this pose and really know that "Charles" is a connoisseur of art in its myriad forms, a composer, a gracious host, and a church man. She likes the Charles Dawes who played his violin day after day to sick Mrs. McKinley in the White House.

Not the hell-raiser that he likes to make the public believe he is.

To Avoid Shine in Pressing.

Due to the composition of wool fibers, the fabric is difficult to press without becoming slick and shinny especially over seams where there is more than one thickness of cloth. A writer in "Successful Farming" makes this practical suggestion: "I have found that this may be avoided if a slip of heavy paper is placed between the seam and the material pressed during the process of pressing. In order to steam wool material best in pressing I have found the use of three cloths to be desirable. First I place a rather heavy dry cloth on the material, on top of this a slightly dampened cloth of lighter weight, and then cover both with another heavier dry cloth. By using a hot iron, enough steam is produced from the dampened cloth to press the material without any gloss."

FARM FIGHT TO THE FORE

COOLIDGE VETO TO RENEW AGRICULTURAL "REVOLT."

MAY BE PIGEONHOLED

Passage Over Presidential Objections Is Unlikely and Attempt Probably Won't Be Made.

By THOMAS L. STOKES
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 24.—President Coolidge's scorching veto of the McNary-Haugen farm bill was seen here today as enlarging the protest to be staged by discontented agricultural elements at the Kansas City Republican convention, whatever may be its ultimate effect upon individual presidential candidates.

Presidential politics was involved in the immediate problem of whether to attempt passage over a veto. It appeared today no such effort would be made.

Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, sponsor of the bill in the Senate, will bring the matter up today and is expected to move to send the bill to the agricultural committee. If such a motion is adopted, the measure probably would lie in a committee pigeonhole the rest of the session.

Hoover Men May Force Issue.

Senate supporters of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, however, would like to force the issue, if they found the Senate would sustain the President, and thus also sustain the position of Hoover, who recently reiterated his opposition to the bill. It appeared unlikely today that the Senate could over-ride the veto. Passage over a veto in the House also seems impossible, but the House must wait upon the Senate. If the Senate failed to muster the necessary two-thirds, the veto would stand, since both Houses must over-ride.

The President's veto message was characterized by direct and scathing language. The bill was called "cruelly deceptive in its disguise as governmental price fixing legislation," and as laden with "fallacious and indeed dangerous aspects." The President objected to "its attempted price fixing fallacy;" to the "widespread bureaucracy which it would set up;" to "it's encouragement to profiteering and wasteful distribution by middlemen;" to its "stimulation of overproduction," to its "aid to our foreign agricultural competitors," and to the "tax characteristics of the equalization fee."

"Plague of Petty Officials."

Mr. Coolidge suggested it would impose on farmers and consumers "a regime of futile delusive experiments with price fixing." He added it was "bureaucracy gone mad," and that it would establish "a bureaucratic tryanny of unprecedented proportions," and a "plague of petty officialdom."

The President argued the bill would encourage profiteering "at the expense of the farmer and of the consumer" and remove the incentive to effective organization and to competition for markets. Packers, millers and the like, he contended, would be the only ones surely benefitting from it.

He further contended overproduction would be stimulated and the group heeding curtailment warnings would be penalized by a small minority seeking profit by over production.

The President insisted the equalization and surplus provisions would tend to make grain cost less abroad than in the states. Thereby enabling foreign manufacturers to pay lower wages and seriously to compete with American wage earners—the best consumers of American farm products.

LOCATION OF 71 DEFENDED

STATE ENGINEER DENIES POLITICIAL INFLUENCE.

CHARGED AT BOLCKOW

Letter From W. W. Craig, Mayor, Brings Reply From Cutler.—Says Cost Lower.

Jefferson City, May 24—Charges that St. Joseph politicians influenced the state highway commission in the relocation of U. S. highway 71 through Andrew County from Savannah to the Nodaway County line were denied vigorously yesterday by T. H. Cutler, chief engineer of the highway department.

The accusation political influence was used was made by W. W. Craig, mayor of Bolckow, which is on the old location, in a letter to C. D. Matthews, chairman of the commission, a copy of which was received by The Star.

The route was changed from the original "east route" to the present Bennett Lane route because of the lessened cost of the latter and removal of the danger of overflow which existed on the original survey, Cutler explained. The cost of construction was reduced approximately $100,000 by the change, the chief engineer said.

Fail in Appeal Effort.

Residents of Bolckow and other small towns along the original survey made an unsuccessful effort to enjoin the department from constructing the road along the present route selection in the Cole County circuit court. Judge Henry J. Westhues declined to interfere and fixed a $15,000 appeal bond which has never been filed. The route misses the town from one to three miles.

In his letter Craig charges the department proceeded with construction while the case was on appeal. It had not been appealed, so far as the department knew, Cutler said.

Cutler also points out in his letter that 71 is a primary route built for through traffic and not primarily for the residents of the Andrew County communities.

"As far as I know no one outside of our own department in St. Joseph interested himself for either route and most certainly did not use any influence with the present personnel of this department," Cutler stated in his letter.

Hear From "East Route's" Friends.

"Quite a few politicians from your own immediate vicinity did try to bring influence to select the east route and other interested citizens and school authorities from Maryville and other points requested the department to make a decision on one route or another so that work could proceed, but did not state which route they preferred.

"You further state that you do not think we are spending the people's money fairly by proceeding in the face of the case pending before the supreme court. I think you must be grossly in error, as an injunction was brought against the department prior to the letting of the contract. The contract was not awarded to the low bidder until after this injunction was dissolved. We have no record in this office of the appeal to a higher court having been perfected. Therefore, when you refer to the case pending before the supreme court you are speaking of something which as yet has not taken place."

Suicides Up in Paris.

Paris, May 24.—Deaths by suicide are increasing here. Last year there were 1,597 cases as against 1,341 for the preceding year. In 1927 there were 527 women suicides. In notes left love troubles were given as the cause of the self-inflicted death of 334 persons.
